N.C. State Women's Soccer Academy, the City of Raleigh and the Capital Area Soccer League Announce ROCKS Foundation Award

Raleigh, NC (May 18, 2012) – The city of Raleigh Parks and Recreation and Department and the Capital Area Soccer League (CASL), through North Carolina State University Women's Soccer Program, has awarded three camp admissions to the NC State Women's Soccer Academies. These ROCKS Foundation awards are based on the city's and CASL's ROCKS programming initiative and will primarily target rising U-13 and U-14 female players for the Day Camp, Evening Camp and Junior Elite Residential Academy in June and July on the NC State Campus.

"This is a great example of how our three organizations can integrate and provide awards to our young community members who are able to experience a high level of soccer education in a collegiate environment," said Charlie Slagle, Chief Executive Office of the Capital Area Soccer League. "We are pleased to present these awards," adds Steve Springthorpe, head women' coach and Academy Camp Director. "We hope these players will enjoy our camps and are confident we can deliver a broader soccer experience in which they can further develop their soccer abilities."

The NC State Women's Soccer Academies provides female soccer players ages 4-18, high level training with low coach to player ratios in a university setting. All soccer activities and games will enhance the player's technical and tactical development. Both residential and commuter camp options are available.
